

Individualist Party

Katie Huntzinger

Our symbol is the seahorse because in the male seahorse carries the babies which in our society is seen as the women's job. The Individualist Party believes in gender equality, along with civil equality.

The Individualist Party is much like the Republican Party. We believe in limited government involvement because society should theoretically function as a whole if all individuals took care of themselves and their own family. Our goal is to create a society that is mostly self-sufficient. Here are the basic ideals of the Individualist Party:

- Rely on minimal government help; especially in finance so the government can use money to protect America from harm
- If an individual is able to work but refuses to put effort through, absolutely no government or community help should be offered
- The rich should be taxed like other individuals but forced to give money to charities as well
- We believe that an education is necessary in order to land a job to support your family
- Taxes should not be based on income and all taxes should have an equal amount
